THE INTERNATIONAL DIMENSION OF ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY

Environmental Policy, International Competitiveness and the Location Behaviour of Firms

Kerkrade, The Netherlands, 7-12 October 2000

Chairperson:	Laura Marsiliani (Tilburg University, The Netherlands)
Vice-Chairperson:	Michael Rauscher (Rostock University, Germany)
Co-Chairperson:	Cees Withagen (Tilburg University, and Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, The Netherlands)

Preliminary Programme

The conference series "The International Dimension of Environmental Policy" will contribute to our understanding of firms' reactions to environmental policies and of governments' incentives to implement those policies. Some of the latest theoretical and empirical research findings that integrate capital flight, ecological dumping, the Porter hypothesis, trade and environment, political-economy and distributional issues of international environmental policy will be presented. The main objective of the conference series is to bring together the leading researchers in the field as well as young researchers, policy makers, industrialists and non-government organisations, in order to discuss the new scientific developments and provide political recommendations.

Speakers will provisionally include:

Scott Barrett (Johns Hopkins University, USA)

Per Fredriksson (SMU, USA)

Henk Folmer (Tilburg University, The Netherlands)

Raymond Florax (Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, The Netherlands)

Shelby Gerking (University of Wyoming, USA)

John List (University of Central Florida, USA)

Peter Neary (University College Dublin, Ireland)

Scott Taylor (University of Wisconsin, Madison, USA)

Alistair Ulph (University of Southampton, UK)

Tony Venables (London School of Economics, UK)

Myrna Wooders (University of Warwick, UK)

Aart de Zeeuw (Tilburg University, The Netherlands)
